ARE YOU STUDYING OPERATIONAL RESEARCH (OR), MANAGEMENT SCIENCE, ANALYTICS OR ANOTHER NUMERATE SUBJECT?

The OR Society Student Membership is FREE for those studying a relevant subject. It can help you through your studies and onto the first step of your career.

WHAT IS OPERATIONAL RESEARCH (OR)?

OR is the discipline of applying appropriate, often advanced, analytical methods to help make better decisions.

OR is concerned with assisting and advising decision-makers in a wide variety of settings - in business and commerce, national and local government, the Health Service, and so on. OR practitioners help to find new approaches to problems faced by organisations, and carry out analysis to clarify objectives and priorities, define alternative courses of action, and explore costs and benefits.

The OR approach often involves quantitative thinking and the use of techniques such as computer simulation and mathematical modelling. However, OR also offers non-quantitative ways of structuring and modelling issues.

Whatever methods are brought to bear, it is essential that the OR practitioner should be able to take a fresh, creative view of situations, to exercise initiative, and to communicate effectively.
